MATTERS POLITICAL

How The Result of the County Races Will Affect the Contest for United States Senator.

Another issue the voters of Washington county must decide when they cast their ballots in November is whether Kentucky is to have the rule of the people or the rule of a machine. For the past eight years, there has been under construction or in operation in Kentucky a political machine, designed primarily to be used against republicans, but recently improved to be equally effective against democrats. That there is such a machine in Kentucky, there is no possible room for doubt. Some of us were more reluctant to admit its existence than others and that accounts for its present existence. A long line of democrats from Blackburn to Hays, have testified before the people of its existence and their fate has proven its effectiveness. Some of them have made a virtue of necessity and, after having tried in vain to destroy it, have joined it. Hendricks persuaded the people of Washington county four years ago, that it existed and tried for awhile to destroy it—but it takes a mightier force to destroy it than Hendricks, than Blackburn or McCreary. Nothing short of an united people can smash it. It would be unjust to call it democratic, although that is the respected name it has assumed for itself. It is as far from being true democracy, as it is from republicanism. It makes us feel, that nothing short of a crime has been committed when we hear grey-haired men, venerable with age and admirable in their devotion to principle say "We have no home, all our lives we have been democrats, and have been proud of it, but they have forsaken its principles and stolen its name." These men were democracy's conscience and would not have sacrificed their loyalty for a kingdom. And when, in November, these old patriots, veterans of a half hundred campaigns, put principle above a mere name and vote with the republicans, whom they have always opposed, for Kentucky's redemption, they will have paid the full measure of patriotism.

When the local candidates ask you for your vote in November, they ask it not only for themselves, but for others as well. You do not merely vote for Gore or Jarvis, McChord or Barlow. What will they do with that vote? Will they cast it for the chief architect of that machine? Will they use it to perpetuate its iniquities? This is the real issue. It can not be concealed nor confused. One or the other must go, the rule of the people or the rule of the machine. Let the machine triumph and its victory will strengthen it, and it will be harder to destroy the next time. Its practices will no longer be confined chiefly to cities. but counties will feel its clutches. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." Already we have witnessed its invasion of Washington county. The action of the democratic county committee was final when it nominated Gore and all other candidates were barred. Its action may or may not have reflected the will of the voters. Its action in ignoring Goodlet's candidacy for representative was anything but fair. Again its action may or may not have represented the will of the voters. We hold no brief for any disappointed democrat, but this bears a curious semblance to some of the practices of the machine. Let the machine win in November, and you may expect to see it in full operation even in our county hereafter.

Whether from policy or from natural causes, the two local democratic nominees seem to have different ideas as to how a campaign for office should be made. One believes in much speaking; the other, in much silence. This difference is made more interesting by the fact that the one who does the speaking now has been, for the past dozen years at least, very still, while the one who is now silent has, in the past, been most active in speaking out, through his paper. Of course, this is a matter that concerns these gentlemen but they certainly can not object to our speculating upon this singular phenomenon or wondering as to its meaning. It may be by design. If so, what is this hidden design? The editor of a democratic paper ought to have something more to offer its patrons, in a tight like this, than extracts carefully culled and studiously selected from other papers less afraid. Is there no political darkness for the Sun's rays to illumine? Or does the Sun prefer darkness to light? The scripture hath it, that "They that prefer darkness to light" do so "because their deeds are evil." Can it be that the complications are such as to confound the genial editor of the Sun? For instance, it is generally believed that Beckham would put on the "lid," that Trimble is for the repeal of Sunday laws and for open saloons, and that Hager is for anything to get votes, for they stated, so it is reported, that these are their respective positions. Is the democratic candidate for Senator for any or all of these? He is pledged to vote for Beckham, if elected; will he also vote for Trimble and Hager in November? Or what does the editor of the Sun think of Tyler? Would he vote for him, if he lived in Louisville? Does he advise temperance democrats to vote for Trimble, who says that he indorses Tyler? Does he indorse Hager when he says as he is reported to have said at Maysville, "I am a democrat. If the democratic party is for temperance, I am for temperance; if it is for whiskey, I am for whiskey? What does he think of Hines, the wet nurse of this unhappy family? Hines, the manager of the democratic campaign—Hines, the leader of the whiskey interests in Bowling Green? Silence may be safer, but there are times when silence deceives.

Thomas A. Edison, the great American inventor, says: "Fully eight per cent of the illness of mankind comes from eating improper food, or too much food; people are inclined to over-indulge themselves." This is where indigestion finds its begining in nearly every case. The stomach can do just so much work and no more, and when you overload it, or when you eat the wrong kind of food the digestive organs cannot possibly do the work demanded of them. It is at such times that the stomach needs help; it demands help, and warns you by headachs;, belching, sour stomach, nausea and indigestion You should attend to this at once by taking something that will actually do the work for the stomach. Kodol will do this. It is a combination of natural digestants and vegtable acids and contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. It is pleasant to take. It digests what you eat Sold by the Red Cross Drug Store.

Marion Grand Jury.

The Marion county grand jury adjourned Wednesday afternoon after having been in session fifteen days. A total of thirty-seven indictments were returned during the session, twenty nine of which were brought in since our last issue. Those returned during the past week were for the following offenses: selling liquor in local option territory 12, willful trespass 1, petit larceny 2, assault and battery 1, petit larceny 2, assault and battery 1, gaming 3, malicious cutting 1, robbery 1, shooting on highway 1, breach of the peace 1, dynamiting fish 5, failure to sound whistle when approaching crossing 1.

A complete resume of the work of the grand jury during its entire session follows: selling liquor in local option territory 16, willful trespass 1, petit larceny 2, assault and battery 1, gaming 3, malicious cutting 1, malicious shooting 1, robbery 1, shooting on highway 1, breach the peace 2, dynamiting fish 5, failure to sound whistle when approaching crossing 1. Fifteen of the sixteen indictments for selling whiskey in local option territory were against the same person.—Lebanon Enterprise.

Hard Times in Kansa

The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Coddell, Earl Shamburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief till I tried Dr. King's New Discovery It took less than one bottle to completely cure me." The safest and most reliable cough and cold cure and lung and throat healer ever discovered. Guaranteed by Haydon & Robertson drug store 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Winchester Won.

The executive committee of the Burley Tobacco Growers Association was in session at Winchester Tuesday and Wednesday together with 35 burley growing counties represented by delegates. Clarence LeBus was re-elected president and Lucian Beckner re elected secretary.

Winchester was chosen over Louisville, Cincinnati, Lexington and Maysville as the sale headquarters of the Association, offering free Warehouses and free sample rooms

As a result 60,000 hogsheads of tobacco will be sold annually in that city and many warehouses and factories will be established there.

The spirit among the delegates was one for standing firm to win the fight against the tobacco trust,

The reports from the counties showed decreased acreage, but good crops. There was much talk of greatly curtailing the 1908 crop of tobacco.

Killed By Dogs.

Dogs have been playing havoc with the sheep in the Talmage vicinity within the past few nights, and many farmers have suffered heavily as a result of their depredations. Mr. W. A. Woods reports the loss of seven sheep, Mr. T. J. Hudson five, Mrs. Mattie Voris five, and Mr. William Johnson four or five. Over in the Mayo vicinity Mr. John Woods lost fourteen in one night.

The farmers have held several indignation meetings to devise some method of exterminating the worthless curs, and it is probable that there will be a fewer number of dogs in that community in the near future At the present high price of sheep and the very low price of curs it would seem a good plan to get rid of the latter as quickly as possible—Harrodsburg Democrat.

A GREAT DAY COMING.

Republicans to Have a Big Time in Springfield on Monday Oct. 28th.

HON. E. A. WILSON TO SPEAK.

Monday, Oct. 28 will be field day for the Republicans, of Washington county and to judge from present indications and the interest expressed, one of the biggest crowds that ever gathered in Springfield is expected here on that day.

The star attraction will be of course the Hon. Augustus E Wilson, the Republican candidate for Governor. Mr. Wilson is attracting tremendous crowds and is creating great enthusiasm wherever he speaks in this campaign and the Washington county voters will not fall behind in keeping up the record. The spirit of Republican victory is in the air and the feeling is contagious. Eveaybody appears anxious to hear the political issues discussed by the distinguished Republican candidate and he is making many converts by his telling shots at the Democratic administration and at the claims of the Democratic candidates.

Arrangements are being made by the Republican committee to give Mr. Wilson and his party a hearty reception and every facility will be made to accomodate the crowd and to afford a comfortable place for the speaker. If the weather is fair the speaking will be from a platform erected in front of the Opera House and in case the weather is bad the speaking will take place in the Opera House. Mr. John R. Barber, its owner, having kindly consented to allow it. Owing to the fact that circuit court will be in session the court house will not be available even if it were large enough to make it a desirable place.

The speech made by Mr. Wilson at this place during the Presidential campaign of 1896 is still well remembered by many of the citizens here. Mr. Wilson made a fine impression then with both Democrats and Republicans as a speaker of wonderful power and magnetism.

BRADLEY AT LEBANON

A big delegation of Republicans will go from here to Lebanon on Friday October, 28th to here Hon W. O. Bradley preach Republican doctrine. The ex Governor is a favorite with Washington county people he having spoken in this county on a number of occasions in the past. Next to Mr. Wilson Mr. Bradley is probably the most conspicious figure in the present campaign. He is "stirring the boys" with all his old time vigor wherever he appears and the crowd that goes to Lebanon to hear the Hon. "Billy O" will be well repaid for their trouble.

Bronston was Sick.

Hon. C. J. Bronston was billed to speak here Monday of this week, county court day, but his usual sickness prevented him filling his appointment—or rather the appointment made for him.

Since Charlie "jumped the bounty" with the Democratic party, rendering himself persona non grata with it, it has been more or less in the same condition with Charlie Hence frequent sick spells when called upon to do service. Some "feller" by the name of Headly from somewhere down in the Purchase was sent to fill the appointment. He was listened to by as many as would rather do so than stay out in the rain. A very heavy rain fell Monday afternoon. Hon C. J. Bronston is a very able man and a good speaker.—Lebanon Enterprise.

McChord Elected By National Commission.

Washington, Oct. 11.—C. C. McChord, president of the Kentucky Railroad Commission, was to-night elected president of the National Association of Railroad Commissioners, which adjourned after a four days' session in this city. The honor came to Mr McChord unanimously. While a large majority of the 125 delegates to the convention are Republicans, there was not a dissenting voice to his election.

He was placed in nomination by the Main Railroad Commissioner, B. F. Chadburn, and the nomination was seconded by O P. Gothlin, of Ohio. Both made complimentary speeches in behalf of the Kentucky Commissioner, and his election was followed by an enthusiastic demonstration.

Considerable surprise was manifested among the delegates over the fact that Mr. McChord has opposition for re-elestion in Kentucky. He has proved such an all-round, capable officer, his election to the presidency of the national convention testifying to the high regard in which he is held, that it was taken for granted that the Republicans in Kentucky fully indorsed his record.

FRANKLIN COUNTY CORRUPT ELECTIONS

The Beckham Followers Denounced as Debauchers of the Ballot Box by a Democratic Paper In Frankfort.

"By the time this paper goes to press the election will be nearly over, and if it is carried on out in the state as it is in this city, may God save the country. The Beckham followers, who pose as reformers and more holy than thou people are the debauchers of the ballot box in this city. There has been a wholesale buying of votes here and an attempt to vote negroes that were not even registered as Democrats. All the ward heelers about town were busy as bees. If this policy is carried on generally in the state the grand old Democratic party is in bad hands. We do not know how it is in other places, but it is to be hoped that this the capital city is the only place in the state, where bribery in elections goes unpunished, where votes are bought openly. As it is done here only by the friends of Gov. Beckham, we wonder if he has not promised to pardon all his friends who are election offenders."—Frankfort Call.

GOVERNOR BECKHAM'S TEMPERANCE RECORD

During the controversy at Frankfort over what is known as temperance legislation, a newspaper published at that place printed the letter copied below, with the statement that it had been written by one General Percy Haly to Judge Lassing, but by accident or chance never mailed to him.

Judge Lassing was one of Governor Beckham's personal and political friends, who had become frightened at the governor's seeming enmity to the whisky interests, and wrote to General Haly, warning him of the danger of going too far in that direction. Whereupon General Haly, to assure Judge Lassing that there was no danger and that they were only playing politics, wrote Judge Lassing the letter published below.

General Haly, as is known, is Governor Beckham's closest personal friend and chief political adviser. The words "The Chief," as used in the letter, refer to Governor Beckham. General Haly denied writing the letter and a suit for damages in Anderson county followed, and in that Democratic county, before a Democratic judge, a jury, nearly all of whom were Democrats, decided on the testimony that Haly did write the letter

It fairly describes the position of these latter-day temperance pretenders, "The Chief" being the Democratic nominee for United States senator.

Every man in Kentucky should read it and decide whether such people are worthy of the support of a Kentucky constituency.

"State of Kentucky, Adjutant General's Office.

"Frankfort, March 21, 1906.

"Judge John M. Lassing, Burlington, Ky.

"Dear Judge: Your letter to hand. Don't be alarmed about the State Journal's charges of bribery against the rectifiers, or at Governor Beckham's hint for an investigation. You are right; it might embarrass us, too, and Beckham and all of us know it We know there has been dirty work done among the rectifiers, but we are just using that to bluff them to pass the tax bill, for we must have more money to meet the big increased appropriation or the voters will kick out.

"So you see outward looks don't count for much, and the Chief knows what he is doing. We will get more money by this deal, keep the country people in line, and then we'll get the rectifiers and others back, so as to still have the city organizations safe.

"The temperance bill was worked the same way. We all fought that bill; but when we saw one had to pass, and that passing the County Unit bill with all the big cities exempt will satisfy the liquor people in the cities and the temperance folks in the country, and safely put the whole matter out of politics, which is pretty smooth work for the leaders, we just delivered the goods to both sides. Beckham will do now as then, and there'll be no investigation either.

"With kindest regards, I am,
"Very truly your friend,
"PERCY HALY."

Gross Extravagance by the Democratic Administration.

Mr. Hager said in his Elkton speech that if he was elected governor that he would use the people's money "judiciously and wisely." We hope this is no reflection on the present governor; but doesn't it jar you, coming from one who has been identified with the gross extravagance of the present administration?"—Calloway Times (Dem.).

CATCH A SEA LION ALIVE.

Remarkable Exploit of Three Seattle Children.

Glen Windall and a couple of juvenile companions were killing time around the wharf of the Chlopeck Fish company at the foot of Virginia street, Seattle, when they saw a sea lion butting its nose against the piles of the wharf in a lonesome manner.

The animal looked as if it were lost. It had a sort of pitiful appearance, flopping around far from any other sea lions, and young Windall and his companions immediately conceived the idea that it was up to them to be companionable with the lion, which was only a little fellow about one-third grown.

A boat was obtained by the boys, and they got after the lion. Somehow the maritime beast didn't take kindly to the idea of becoming a hanger on to a crowd of water front "kids" and tried to get away. But it couldn't. Several pairs of hands grabbed it while it was deciding what to do about it, and the animal was brought into the boat.

A box was obtained and the sea lion incarcerated. After he had been tickled under the chin a few times, however, and fed everything from peanuts to bananas he began to take very kindly to his new environment, and now he is as tame as a kitten. He is even allowed to go for a swim every day, returning always to his captors. After ownership of a sea lion palls on Windall he will sell the animal to some vaudeville show.

Potato Parings Clean Flues.

It has just been discovered that flue fires may be prevented by a very simple measure, the material for which the farmer especially finds conveniently at hand. The preventive is nothing more than potato parings. This discovery was made by a good housewife who sought to utilize the parings of her potatoes by making fuel of them. She used them mixed with soft coal and found that they not only augmented heat, but by some unknown chemical process removed or destroyed the soot and similar particles from both the stovepipe and chimney flue. After numerous experiments it was found that the conclusions of the housewife were correct.—Farm Progress.

Memory Test.

Seat yourselves in a circle. The leader begins by repeating the first of these sentences loudly and distinctly. The one on the left repeats it after him, and so on around the circle. When all have repeated it, the leader says with equal care the second sentence, joining it to the first; the next person repeats both sentences, and the rest of the company follow in turn. The leader then repeats the third, preceded by the first and second in regular order, etc.:

1. One old ox opening oysters.
2. Two toads totally tired trying to trot to Tedbury.
3. Three thick thumping tigers tickling trout.
4. Four fat farmers fanning flames.
5. Five frivolous foreigners fleeing from fashions from France.

The player who makes no mistake in repeating the entire list of sentences wins the game. All who fail drop out at the first lapse of memory.

Two Odd Words.

Some words undergo queer changes in signification. Take "prestige," for example. We get it from the Latin praestigiae, which means "juggling tricks." The French prestige [illegible] is derived from the same word. [illegible] we use "prestige" to express a [illegible] able impression coming from [illegible] tecedents. The change in meaning [illegible] be traced thus: One that performs juggling tricks charms you by a sort of enchantment, as was formerly believed; hence enchanting is [illegible] charming is done by making [illegible] ble impression. Republican Ticket.

The following ticket was nominated by the Republicans in State Convention in Louisville to be voted for at the November election:

For Governor—Augustus E. Wilson, Louisville.

For Lieutenant Governor.—W. H. Cox, Maysville.

For Attorney General—James Breathitt, Hopkinsville.

For Auditor—Frank P. James, Harrodsburg.

For State Treasurer—Capt. Ed Farley, Paducah.

For Secretary of State—Dr. Ben L. Bruner, Munfordville.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—J. G. Crabbe, Ashland.

For Clerk of Court of Appeals—Napier Adams, Somerset.

For State Senator

G. T. Jarvis is the Republican candidate for State Senator from the 15th Senatorial District composed of Washington, Marion and Taylor counties.

For Representative

W. B. Barlow is a candidate for Representative in the Lower House of the Kentucky Legislature subject to the action of the Republican party.

The Republicans of Marion county in mass convention Monday nominated Thomas C. Jackson as their candidate for Representative in the Legislature. Mr. Jackson is a progressive young business man of the town, for many years having been connected with the Citizens National Bank. He is a conservative Republican, and has a wide personal following, and his hosts of friends look upon him as the man not seeking the office, but the man the office is seeking. A dispatch from Lebanon says: "The machine Democracy of this county is quivering in its boots, and it is believed that Jackson will be elected. C. C. McChord.

While THE NEWS-LEADER is for the regular Republican ticket this fall, yet we don't hesitate to call attention to and to commend the work of a public official which deserves commendation, and we will make one exception in our support of Republican candidates.

We do not believe the people of Kentucky have the slightest idea of defeating Hon. C. C. McChord for Railroad Commissioner. While he is the Democratic nominee; the regular governing authority of the Republican party, namely, its Executive Committee, some weeks ago refused to make a nomination against him thereby virtually endorsing his candidacy; he has, therefore, received the approval of the two great political parties.

The gentleman who has forced himself upon the Republican ticket by petition has no claim upon the Republican party for its support for the reason that he is not its nominee.

By his unanimous election as President of the National Association of Railroad Commissioners, Mr. McChord's work has received the endorsement and approval of the Railroad Commissioners of forty-two States and of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It is gratifying to those who believe in the just regulation of railroads that the Press and various commercial organizations have everywhere put their stamp of approval upon Mr. McChord's official acts and, irrespective of party, are demanding his re-election.

The following is an editorial from the Louisville Herald, (Republican):

"Charles C. McChord was elected Railroad Commissioner ten years ago and was endorsed by the Republicans of the State. He has been a valiant champion of the people; indeed, at this moment we know of no public official Kentucky has to whom she could say with more candor, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

"Mr. McChord has devoted the best part of his life to the cause of the people. He has been a staunch friend of Louisville merchants and manufacturers. He has been able to meet corporate greed with strict interpretation of the law, and in so doing has incurred corporate enmity.

"The Herald holds no brief for Mr. McChord, but it would be careless of the duty it owes the public if it did not do the simple act of justice to an honest official."

The following is from the Louisville Evening Post:

VOTE FOR MCCHORD.

"We note that it is proposed in the face of ther efusal of the Republican Committee of this railroad district to provide for a Republican candidate for Railroad Commissioner, to place the name of Mr. Tarleton under the log cabin.

"This is a tactical error, and is the worse kind of politics. Mr. Tarleton is no doubt an excellent gentleman, but he is not experienced in transportation matters and he does not carry his party a commission. He is a personal candidate forced on the ticket in the face of the adverse action of the party committee.

"But if it were otherwise, if Mr. Tarleton were the regular Republican candidate, Republicans as well as Democrats should vote for Mr. McChord, because of the record he has made.

"The office is not a political office, and the work Mr. McChord is doing is for the benefit of men of all parties.

"Mr. McChord has brought down on his head the wrath of some railroads in politics, because he has been partly responsible for the order restricting the local rates into Louisville to the basis of Cincinnati rates from Kentucky.

"The railroads are discriminating against Louisville in this feature of rates. They are making local traffic rates to Cincinnati which they refuse to Louisville. The Commission has ordered a reduction for Louisville to the Cincinnati basis.

"The railroads resist in the Federal courts, saying the reduction would be ruinous, would be confiscatory, admitting the competition has forced down the rates into Cincinnati. Yet they are not ruined.

"The Republicans, in view of this situation, declined to nominate against Mr. McChord. Certainly Louisville owes Mr. McChord its hearty support.

"Stamp under the log cabin, stamp opposite McChord's name."

The Louisville Times in a recent issue says:

"Regardless of political affiliation, business men of Louisville and Kentucky have indorsed the candidacy of Mr. McChord, and it was not believed, in view of this fact, that he would have opposition for re-election. His services as chairman of the Kentucky Railroad Commission were recognized as being most valuable by the business men of the State, and they are desirous of keeping him in the position where he can protect their interests against the railroads. To this end a nonpartisan movement to indorse his candidacy swept through practically the whole State.

"Sometime ago the railroads secured an injunction restraining the Kentucky Railroad Commission from enforcing its rule reducing the rates. This case is now pending before Federal Judge Cochran and evidence in the case is being taken by Col. Sam H. Stone, Special Commissioner. The case will eventually go to the Supreme Court of the United States and the duties of the Kentucky Commission will then be defined so that its powers will thereafter be unquestioned. If the commission is sustained, freight rates and passenger rates in Kentucky will be reduced. Other benefits have been derived by the business men of Kentucky by reason of Mr. McChord's activity. Old rattle traps in many Kentucky towns have been replaced by modern stations and depots as a result of the war waged by the members of the commission.

Why Colds are Dangerous

Because you have contracted ordinary colds and have recovered from them without treatmen of any kind do not for a moment imagine that colds are not dangerous. Every one knows that pneumonia and chronic catarrh have their origin in a common cold. Consumption is not caused by a cold but the cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs that would not of otherwise found lodgment. It is the same with all infectious diseases, Diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough are much more likely to be contracted when the child has a cold. you will see from this that more real danger lurks in a cold than in any other of the common ailments. The easiest and quickest way to cure a cold is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The many remarkable cures effected by this preparation have made it a staple article of trade over a large part of the world. For sale by Haydan & Robertson.

To Disinfect a Room.

A simple disinfectant for use in a sickroom or in any room where a close, musty or sewer smell is noticed is to put some ground coffee on a shovel and a bit of camphor gum in the middle of it. Light the gum, which is nonexplosive and easily ignited, with a match and allow the coffee to burn with the gum. A refreshing and sanitary perfume is the result.

Reading Gets Atlantic League Pennant.

After a long session recently the directors of the Atlantic league announced that Reading had won the pennant. The forfeited game between Reading and Easton was discussed, and the board formally awarded the game to the former team. The Brooklyn-Easton contest, in which Manager Russell's men were defeated and which was claimed by him to be an exhibition contest, was awarded to Easton.

Uses For Salt Bags.

Save your salt bags. Being stitched on a single thread, they can be readily ripped apart and when washed serve for a variety of purposes. Though strong, they are usually loosely woven, so are especially useful as strainers in the preserving season. Two medium sized ones stitched together make the best kind of a jelly bag. All sizes are useful as coverings for fruit or vegetables or anything that must not be covered tightly and yet requires protection on the pantry shelves or in the cellar. In fact, their uses are so various that it would be difficult to enumerate them.

Queer Figures.

Take the number of your living brothers, double the amount and add to it three, multiply by five, add to it the number of your living sisters, multiply by ten, add the number of deaths of brothers and subtract 150 from the result. The right figure will be the number of deaths, the middle will be the number of living sisters, and the left will show the number of living brothers. Try it and see.

Table Etiquette.

Now, Willie boy, your Uncle Ben is coming to tea, to tea,
Along with auntie, and I hope a good child you will be.

A napkin's not a handkerchief, remember that, my dear.
For should you use it thus I fear my frown would be severe.

Don't pull meat chunks out of your mouth and throw them on the rug.
And should you crave a little cream don't gulp it from the jug.

And, Susie girl, should brother dear refuse to pass the cheese
Don't hurt the upper hot at him; it's apt to make him sneeze.

And just before it's cut don't stick your fingers in the pie.
For if you do you'll surely force me to exclaim, "Oh, fie!"

So, Willie boy, you must be nice, and so must Sister Sue,
For if you should be somewhat rude I've told you what I'll do!

Cleaning Chiffon.

To wash and restore chiffon the length is folded and soaked in a soap lather and the hand occasionally drawn down it while it remains therein. It is also patted between the palms of the hands until clean, then removed and pressed between the hands in order to squeeze out the soap, rinsed in plenty of clear water and pressed as before, this time to extract all the water. It should never be wrung, but folded flatly between thick cloths and pressed under a wringing machine, when it should be ironed immediately.

Baked Toast.

Cut the crust from the bread, slice and toast. As each slice is toasted dip it in salted hot water, then lay in a pudding dish, putting a few bits of butter and a little salt on each slice. When the dish is packed full of the toast pour over it scalding milk, to which add a little cream if you have any to spare. Fill the dish to the brim with the milk, then cover closely and set in the oven to bake for twenty minutes. The toast should be tender all through and absorb most of the milk.

Turpentine For Coughs.

Turpentine cures coughing. Inhale turpentine as much as possible. At night saturate a folded handkerchief with turpentine and pin to the pillow. Place another handkerchief under each arm and saturate the comfort in places with the upper sheet between to avoid the turpentine burning the flesh. A flannel cloth greased with turpentine and laid on the sheet often effects an immediate cure.

TIES BURGLAR TO A TREE.

Girl Grabs Intruder, Beats Him and Binds Him Fast.

Pluckily attacking a burglar who had entered her room, Miss Jeanette Armstrong, of Towaco, Morris county, N. J., after knocking the man down covered him with a revolver until help arrived. In the struggle Miss Armstrong's shoulder was put out of commission temporarily by a blow from a wagon wrench.

Miss Armstrong was a guest at the home of Aaron Jacobus. Her room overlooked the roof of the porch that surrounds the house. She was awakened by a noise and saw a man ripping the mosquito netting from the window of her room. A moment later he climbed through the window. Shefeigned sleep until the man entered the room. Then she sprang from the bed and grappled with him.

The young woman had taken a revolver from under her pillow, but in her excitement dropped it. The burglar made at her with uplifted hand. She caught his arm with her left hand, but the blow fell upon her shoulder.

With her right hand she landed on the point of the fellow's chin, and he went down. In an instant the girl had the revolver and had covered him. Mr. Jacobus, his wife and their children ran in. The nearest neighbor is some distance away, and it was decided to tie the man for the night. His arms were pinioned by Miss Armstrong, who then bound him to a tree in the yard.

The family waited until morning, intending to take him to Boonton. At daylight he was gone. The ropes that bound him had been cut.

It is thought the robber had a confederate and that when he was tied the man watched his chance and cut the ropes. Miss Armstrong lives in Scranton, Pa.

Man Turns Three Colors.

After going through the experience of having his body turn to a deep red, then blue and finally coal black from the force of an electric current William Hicks, an employee of the New York and New Jersey Telephone company, is slowly recovering from the shock. Hicks was at work splicing cables at the top of a thirty-five foot pole at Bradley Beach, N. J. He accidentally took hold of a high tension wire, and instantly he was hurled from the pole and held dangling from the wire. He tried in vain to free himself, but so strong was the current that his hands were held tightly to the wire. Finally his body became rigid. Workmen ran to the pole, but were several minutes in reaching Hicks. Meantime bystanders were horrified to see him gradually turn a deep red, then bluish and finally black. His hands were at last pried from the wire, and he was lowered to the ground with a block and tackle.

How Beckham Loves the Soldier.

During the Bradley administration a pathetic story came of sick Kentucky soldiers at New ports News, who had lost their health in serving their country while it was at war with Spain.

Following the dictates of patriotism, Gov. Bradley gave a note, in his official capacity, for the sum of $3,000 to pay the cost of bringing the sick men back to their homes in the old Com monwealth they loved. The note fell due after Gov. Bradley had gone out of office, and has since remained unpaid With all its boasts of a surplus the Democratic administration has been too sordid to discharge this patriotic obligation. The good name of Kentucky is discredited by its delinquency in the matter of a trifling debt.

Will Beeknam. Hager & Co. stop long enough from the telling of pipe dreams about how much they have sayed the taxpayers to settle this claim? Or is Kentucky still to be reckoned a defaulter in the cause of its soldiers.—Herald.

Arabian Masoud Versus Carolina.

Challenging him to complete the contest between their Kentucky and Aradian bred horses in an across the continent test of endurance, which was postponed last summer on account of the illness of the Arabian contestant, Homer Davenport, cartoonist and horse fancier, who is here exhibiting his fancy Arabians, wrote a letter yesterday to Gen. John B. Castemun, President of the Kentucky Saddle Horse Breeders' Association.

The contest which is to be held under the auspices of the War Department, for the purpose of ascertaining the comparative value of the native Kentucky bred animal with the imported article for cavalry use, would be one of the great interest not only from the point of view of use for the army, but as a contest of horse flesh "bred in old Kentucky" and those brought here from the desert sands of Arabia.

Anticipating the challenge or a renewal of the contest, Gen. Castleman was approached on the subject Friday night by a representative of the Herald. At that time, he did not take kindly to the idea of matching his favorite mare, Carolina, against the Arabian horse, Masould, Mr. Davenport's animal, but did not give specific reasons for his demu r ng. Gen. Castleman was out of town yesterday, and, therefore, did not receive the Arabian owner's challenge. It is hoped that it will be accepted.—Louisville Herald.

SOUTH TRIMBLE AND THE NEGRO

The Democratic Candidate for Lieutenant Govenor Indulges in Violent Abuse of the Colored Voter

Judge James Breathitt the Republican nominee for Attorney general and who spoke at Willisburg on yesterday afternoon and in Springfield last night, met Congressman South Trimble the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor in joint debate at Pikeville on the 10th. The feature of the meeting was the tirade of abuse the Democratic candidate heaped on the negroes, whose votes the Democrnts will doubtless be seeking at the coming election. We publish below an account of the speaking as sent to a Louisville paper:

Judge James Breatnitt, candidate for Attorney General on the Republican ticket, and Congressman South Trimble, of the Seventh district, candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket, met in joint debate in the courthouse this yesterday afternoon at this place. Judge Brethitt spoke first and made one of the most telling speeches that was ever delivered in Pike county. He presented facts and figures showing the mismanagement of the State affairs under the Democratic administration. This was far the best speech of the campaign in this section. On the question of Sunday closing he propounded the question to Mr. Trimble, "if he indorsed Owen Tyler's course in Louisville in advocating a repeal of the Sunday-closing law, and keeping saloons open on Sunday?" In response to this Mr. Trimble answered that he indorsed the candidacy of Mr. Tyler, and if he was in Louisville and an elector of said district, he would vote for him, that he believed in voting the Democratic ticket "straight" regardless of what they stood for. After Mr. Breathitt closed his talk, Mr. Trimble arose in an excited manner and made one of the most abusive speeches, if it could be called a speech, ever delivered in this section He did not touch upon facts or any issue in the campaign at all; but took his text on the "Murder of William Goebel, and the Negro." After exhausting all of his vocabulary, which seemed to be limited in so far as his delivering a speech was concerned, he turned loose on the poor old negro and spoke in part as follows:

"White Republicans are all right, but the 'sore spot' with me against them is the negro question. They advocate the rights of seventy-five thousand negroes in Kentucky who are the meanest, blackest, slimest of the earth, who ought to be disfranchised. I must say that Ham made a mistake in allowing them to go into the ark so that there would be one of the black scoundrels treading the face of the earth, and it is a great pity at the close of the war that nre was not touched to every negro tent in the South. They are you might say the scrapings of the devil. They are the most fiendish,, hellish set on earth. The Democratic party in the South with shooting guns have helped to relieve the nation of a great many of these black beasts of the field. I am acquainted with sections of this State where the negroes are so thick that if you rent a courtroom to make a speech in, that you would have to burn asafoetida and carbolic acid to kill the smell."

His speech was disgusting to both Democrats and Republicans except a few Democratic partisans who applauded his speech especially regarding the negro. In reply Judge Breathitt handled him without gloves, and by responding to him on the only two questions on which his speech dwelt. Judge Breathitt made a wonderful impression here, and by all who heard it his speech was pronounced one of the best of the campaign. Such speeches as Trimble made here to-day will only tend to increase the Republican majority in Pike county.

His Dear Old Mother

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty-three years old, thrives on Electric Bitters" writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children, too, are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles by Haydon & Robertson Druggists 50c.

Girl Stabbed

Miss Jessie Lloyd, the fourteen-year-old daughter of the Rev. W. F. Lloyd, former pastor of the Union Methodist church was wounded at 5:50 o'clock yesterday afternoon by being stabbed by a strange man in the right hip, on Chestnut street, between Seventh and Eighth. She was walking at the time on the south side of the street with Miss Jennie Plummer, a companion, and the man approached in the opposite direction. Just as he met the two girls and was about to pass Miss Llovd felt a sharp pain, and immediately realized that she had been stabbed. She did not scream, but leaned over on Miss Plummer, telling her that she was wounded. The man did not stop, but walked on in his usual gait By the time the girls had gotten to the home of the Rev. Mr. Lloyd, which was half a block away, he was nearly out of seeing distance. The Rev. Mr, Lloyd immediately notified the police department, and a search was at once started.

Miss Lloyd said that she did not notice the man as he approached them, but that she remembered he was white, and that he had on a cap, which was pulled down over his eyes. He seemed to be a middle aged man and of average height.

The wound inflicted is not of a serious nature, but but had it been a few inches higher it might have been fatal. When an examination was made by Dr. E. P. Bruce, who was summoned it was found that the wound inflicted was an inch deep. From its nature it seemed to be evident that the blade used was two-edged.

Two theories for the unprovoked assault have been advanced. One is that it was a case of mistaken identity. and the other that the assailant may have arrived in Louisville from other towns where similar occurences have happened, has a mania for slashing women. A thorough investigation will be made by the police department, —Courier Journal.

TYLER AND HAGER

They Both are Favored by Saloon Keepers in Louisville.

The article which we publish below from the Louisville Post gives some insight into how S. W. Hager the Democratic candi date for Governor is regarded by some of the tougher element of saloon keepers in the city of Louisville. It bears out the assertion that the Democratic candidate for Governor is playing for the moral vote in the country and for the tough vote in the cities. The article follows:

The Evening Post is able to present today all the facts of the meeting of saloonkeepers held yesterday at Bosler's Hotel to organize the liquor trade in Louisville for Owen Tyler for Mayor and S. W. Hager for Governor.

The chief speakers at the meeting were:

"Billy" Boardman, Henry Bronger, H. S. McNutt, Joe Herrmann, Jim Edwards.

"Billy" Boardman and Henry Bronger were, however, the two particular stars of the occasion. Boardman is proprietor of the Boston saloon, Fourth and Market, but his chief interest in the affair is that he possesses the bar privileges at the race tracks. and it is understood that the race track men, headed by Charles F. Grainger, stand ready to revoke his privileges unless he works for Tyler and Hager. Therefore the saloon men say that for his own selfish interests Boardman is making this play and injuring the business and prospects of every law-abiding saloonkeeper in Louisville.

The appearance of Henry Bronger as a Tyler-Hager leader also caused great surprise. Bronger for years ran one of the most notorious dives in Lou isville. His saloon was frequented by thieves and prostitutes. It was in Henry Bronger's saloon that the yeggmen were arrested who robbed Albaugh's store at Shoals, Ind , of thousands of dollars.

Bronger's saloon license was taken away, but one of his sons still runs a Green street saloon. Henry Bronger himself wants to re-enter the liquor business and he made a vehement speech for Owen Tyler for Mayor and S. W. Hager for Governor.

Reputable saloon organizations have refused for months to have anything to do with Henry Bronger. He is not a member of the Mutual Protective Asscciation, but he appeared yester day as one of the chief organizers for Owen Tyler, S. W. Hagor and the "Democratic" ticket.

In opening his remarks Boardman said. "This is not a meeting of the Mutual Protective Association, although I am here as the president of that body. This is a meeting of saloon keepers to organize for Owen Tyler for Mayor and S. W. Hager for Governor.

"Now, remember this. Owen Tyler has publicly promised that our saloons can remain open on Sundays if he is elected no matter whether the law is repealed or not.

"That is not all. If we elect Tyler Mayor the old days will come back and we can do in our saloons just what we want. Tyler is for liberty.

"Now, remember to vote for S. W. Hager, the Democratic nominee for Governor. Hager is our friend. Don't pay any attentions to the newspapers' reports of his speeches. Hager is for Owen Tyler and Owen Tyler is for Hager. We must organize and work."

Then Henry Bronger arose. Bronger said the saloonkeepers must work for Tyler and Hager. "I am a Louisville Democrat," said Bronger, the former keeper of a thieves' resort "I am for Owen Tyler, and I want to say I am for S. W. Hager for Governor."

Bronger then spoke at length about the good things coming if only Willson and Grinstead can be defeated.

H. S. McNutt who runs a saloon on Fifth Street near Market, then spoke. McNutt has a grievance, In the old days he was a power in the liquor trade, but when the Mutual Protective Association decided to obey the law McNutt was set aside. McNutt wanted to get back to the old times. "We are Democrats," said McNutt. "Work for Tyler for Mayor."

"How about these prohibition speeches Hager is making?" asked a saloonkeeper.

"Don't mind them," replied McNutt. 'We are for Hager. He is running with Tyler, and you know what Tyler is going to do for us. I am for Tyler and Hager,"

At later meetings Joe Herrmann, Jim Edwards and Jim Reedy, Democratic nominee for Police Court Judge, addressed the saloonkeepers.

The SPORTING WORLD

Advice to Shot Putters by an Expert.

The veteran weight throwing champion, Jim S. Mitchell of New York, gives the following hints in regard to putting the shot. He says:

Don't stoop too low when starting to put.

Don't delay in the hop to the center of the circle.

Always remember to bring the body well around before the arm starts to shoot out.

Always use an iron shot in preference to a lead one.

To a right handed putter the main strain falls on the right ankle, and in order to prevent accidents it is best to use an elastic stocking or rubber bandage while practicing.

The amount of work each day may be explained in a paragraph. An athlete cannot put often enough until he has learned the knack, but as he grows proficient the number of puts should be curtailed by degrees. After he has mastered the rudiments of the game an average of about six or eight puts per day, with a little dumbbell exercise in the morning or evening, will be sufficient.

The athlete should at all times put in his best style, standing well up on his toes and with all the dash and fire he is capable of throwing into his movements.

Poisoned Water For Trotters.

The poisoning of the water in the fine lake of L. V. Harkness' Walnut Hall farm at Lexington, Ky., has given rise to fears that some of the fine trotters may die, as have all the fish that were in the lake.

The water from the spring which supplies the pond is pumped into every paddock of the farm, and it is believed that had enough of the poison been placed in the spring every horse in the great breeding establishment, including Moko, Walnut Hall, Fereno and Ozanam, might have been killed.

A quality of the water and some of the fish were sent to the State college experiment station for analysis.

Jones Talks on Ball Players.

Whenever a baseball manager has a few moments to spare nowadays he usually uses them in telling how much better or worse the ball players of today are than those of a decade or more ago.

Fielder Jones, captain of the Chicago Americans, recently announced his ideas on the subject. He said: "It is ridiculous to say that the players of today are not far in advance of those of twenty-five years ago.

"The game has improved in every department. The trouble with any man who contends that the players of old outclassed those of today is this: In the old days there were about fifteen or twenty good players, and those few showed the others up. Nowadays every man must be a star or he does not play. That is why there are no bright particular stars that shine out by themselves. Every man is a star, and he is playing such magnificent ball that a great play is forgotten from day to day by the ever happening features in almost every game."

CAPTAIN FIELDER A. JONES, CHICAGO AMERICANS.

It Is Queer.

Little Boy — Isn't fathers queer? Auntie—In what way? Little Boy—When a boy does anything for his pa, he doesn't get anything, but if another man's boy does it he gets a nickel.

Another Combine.

The local dairyman have met and entered into an agreement raising the price of the lacteal fluid. Sweet milk that sold at 20 cents a gallon now costs 30 cents a gallon and buttermilk was lifted 2½ cents on the gallon and cream was elevated 20 cts on the gallon. The milk men say that the increase caused a great howl from the consumers, but they had to raise or go out of business, for feed is costing them just twice what it use to. We don't knew but what they have a right to do as they did, for butchers have raised the price of meat on them, and tin has gone up, as well as every thing else they use.—Harrodsburg Herald.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by a inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. deafness is the result and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for ever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarre, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous sursaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafdess (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Local Option in Ohio.

A Pittsburg special says: "Send on evening train twenty-two unabridged dictionaries, nineteen small dictionaries and seventeen hair mattresses." The new clerk in a wholesale liquor house gasped when he read the order, and decided the sender was insane. The old clerk put up twenty-two full quarts of whisky, nineteen pints of whisky and seventeen quart bottles of wine packed in straw. Then he consigned the shipment to East Liverpool, that arid district in Ohio with a population of over 20,000 and not a single saloon. Prohibition in East Liverpool and its neighborhood, Wellsville, which is also "dry," is not a success, so far as prohibiting the use of intoxicants goes. In addition to the vast amount of liquor that is shipped into the two cities from Pittsburg, an average of 500 men from the two cities go each night to Pittsburg or Ironton, O., get all they can drink, and then go back and do their fighting. The police declare that there has never been such lawlessness in the two cities as since the local option law went into effect.

Forming Syllables.

Nearly everybody is puzzled now and then over the proper division of some word or other into syllables, particularly when the work breaks at the end of a line. Printers know how to do it, for it is a necessary part of their education, and other people may soon learn by remembering certain general rules and keeping their eyes open. For example, consonants should usually be joined to the vowels or diphthongs that they modify, as in the word ap-os-tol-ic-al. Two vowels coming together, if they do not make a diphthong, should be separated, as in a-e-ri-al. Derivitire and grammatical terminations should be separated from the radical words to which they belong, as harm-less. Prefixes are generally made separate syllables, unless the primitive meaning be disregarded, as in re-cre-a-tion and rec-re-a-tion. This subject is well worth studying by those who wish to write correctly, even though they may never write anything more ambitious than a letter.—Chicago News.

Lawn Bubble Party.

A tennis court is necessary for this party. The net may be adorned with flags or ribbons or colored paper just to add to its gay appearance. Girls range themselves on one side of the net, boys on the other, or they may play as partners. A bowl of soapy water, to which a tablespoonful of glycerin is added to contribute to the beauty of the prismatic colors, and clay pipes tied with ribbons, color determining sides, are provided by the hostess. The girls blow the bubbles, and the boys blow them over the net from their side, endeavoring to prevent the airy balls from floating into their domain. Each bubble that succeeds in floating over the net counts fifteen points for the side from which it came.

Competition may take the other forms—the largest bubble, the one retaining its form longest or the longest chain of bubbles winning a prize. Ornamental pipes, papier mache soap boxes filled with bonbons and similar trifles are suitable for prizes.

Not Quite Clear.

A well known clergyman of Boston was once talking to some friends with reference to the desirability of chronological coherence in ideas in the form of written statements, when he observed that there are times when this method becomes a trifle too suggestive.

"For instance," said the speaker, "I once heard a minister in New Hampshire make his usual Sunday morning announcements as follows:

"'The funeral of the late and much lamented sexton takes place on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

"'Thanksgiving services will be held in this chapel on Thursday morning at 1 o'clock.'"—Lippincott's.

LUTHER A. BURNS

HAGER AND UNION LABOR

The Eight Hour Printer, of Louisville, fires a few solid shot at S. W. Hager, the Democratic candidate for governor:

Samuel W. Hager, Democratic candidate for governor, opened his campaign at Lexington, delivering his speech printed by the Globe of this city. It will doubtless be circulated over the state. Of course it will not have the union label.

As auditor S. W. Hager voted to award the state printing to the non-union Globe company, why shouldn't he have the non-union Globe company do his printing in his campaign for governor?

Samuel W. Hager, candidate for governor, is state auditor and member of the state printing commission, which has persistently ignored all protests and pleadings of the union printers, and given the state printing to non-union shops; obtained the aid of trade unionists to pass a bill providing for a superintendent of state printing on promise to elect a union printer to that position, and violated the promise by electing a non-union ruralist instead of a competent man, a list of whom were furnished on request by the Typographical Union, and then again give the state printing to a non-union shop. This is the same Hager, who, of course, expects trade unionists to vote for him for governor.

Politics aside, we cannot conceive of any excuse a trade unionist can give for voting for Samuel W. Hager for governor or any other office.

S. W. Hager, candidate for governor, straddled the labor question at Lexington. On his record and reading a rat-printed speech, what better than a straddle could be expected?

A CHAPTER IN MR. HAGER'S TEMPERANCE RECORD.

In 1904 a brewing company applied to the county clerk of Laurel county for a license to establish a wholesale depot at Pittsburg in that county for the sale of their beer. Laurel being a local option county, the clerk wrote to Auditor Hager, the chief fiscal officer of the state, and was advised that it was his duty to issue the license which he did on July 1, 1904. Later the attorneys for the brewing company, not being satisfied as to the right of the clerk to issue the license, wrote Mr. Hager, the auditor, and requested to know whether the license should be issued by the auditor or by the county clerk, and Mr. Hager replied that it should be issued by the clerk.

In June, 1905, before the first license expired, an injunction was sued out by citizens of Pittsburg, Ky., and the clerk restrained from issuing the license. The clerk therefore refused to renew the license and the attorneys for the brewing company tendered the tax to the auditor, who, in accord with his former decision that the clerk should issue the license, and in obedience to the injunction, refused to issue the license. Thereupon the brewing company sued out a mandatory injunction to compel the auditor to issue the license. Judge Stout, an appointee of Governor Beckham, granted the injunction. The auditor appealed the case and might have refused to grant the license pending the appeal, but instead of doing this he issued the license, and drunkenness, debauchery and crime cursed the people of Pittsburg for nearly one year longer, when the court of appeals reversed Judge Stout and the brewery ceased from business at that point. In the meantime many indictments were found against them, and on appeal from fines in these cases the court of appeals decided that neither Auditor Hager nor the county clerk could issue license in a local option county.

In Mr. Hager's eagerness to serve his friends the brewers, remembering, no doubt, the $3,500 check which the brewing combine had given to help his election in 1903, he neglected to ask the attorney general for his opinion on the law, but advised the county clerk, who must report to the auditor, to issue the license notwithstanding the local option law prohibited such action.

The Journal's Attitude Toward the County Unit Bill.

The Kentucky Journal, the personal organ of Governor Beckham, the mouth-piece of the administration at Frankfort and its defender on all occasions, exclaimed, during the pendency of the County Unit Bill in 1906: "Kill the County Unit Bill. It is hoped the senate has shelved it for good and all." Later it said:

"The Anti-Saloon League has issued a proclamation against the County Unit Bill, as amended by the senate, and announced that it will fight the measure and those who vote for it. Such threats have been made so often and their results so fruitless that they will not excite even the weakest-kneed." Still later this same organ, after congratulating the good people of Lincoln county on winning a local option election, added:

"The blind tiger is more demoralizing than the open saloon." That is the stock argument of every whisky man.

The attitude of the governor's personal organ proves the truth of General Percy Haly's letter, when he said: "We all fought that bill; but when we saw one had to pass and the passing the County Unit Bill with all the big cities exempt will satisfy the liquor men in the cities and the temperance folks in the country * * * we just delivered the goods to both sides."

Oh, you needn't hang your head so;
That won't help the thing a bit;
Here's your mother, naughty dolly,
Hard at work; just think of it.

Course I ought to be a-playing

Oh, dear me, I never realized
Half that mothers have to do!

But I've learned a lesson, dolly;
I'll be good as I can be.

October 24,

DEMOCRATIC ATTEMPT TO DISFRANCHISE THE VOTERS

The last Democratic General Assembly, see Acts 1906, Page 303, passed a bill submitting to the people a constitutional amendment whereby all persons are prevented from voting who have not paid in full all state, county, municipal, district and school taxes due by them for the year previous to the one in which they offer to vote.

Said bill is as follows:

CHAPTER 55.

An act relating to amendment of Section 145 of the Constitution, relating to suffrage and elections.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky:

1. That, upon the concurrence of three-fifths of all the members elected to each house, the yeas and nays being taken thereon and entered in full in their respective journals, Section 145 of the Constitution of Kentucky be, and it is, amended by adding a fourth paragraph to said section, containing the following words, to-wit:

"4. Persons who have not, at least sixty days before the election at which they offer to vote, paid in full all state, county, municipal, district and school taxes due by them for the year previous to the one in which they offer to vote."

That Section 145 of the Constitution of Kentucky, relating to suffrage and elections, be amended to read as follows:

1. Every male citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years, who has resided in the state one year and in the county six months, or the precinct in which he offers to vote sixty days next preceding the election, shall be a voter in said precinct and not elsewhere, but the following persons are excepted and shall not have the right to vote:

"1. Persons convicted in any court of competent jurisdiction of treason or felony or bribery in an election, or of such high misdemeanor as the General Assembly may declare shall operate as an exclusion from the right of suffrage; but persons hereby excluded may be restored to their civil rights by executive pardon.

"2. Persons who at the time of the election are in confinement under the judgment of a court for some penal offense.

"3. Idiots and insane persons.

"4. Persons who have not, at least sixty days before the election at which they offer to vote, paid in full all state, county, municipal, district and school taxes due by them for the year previous to the one in which they offer to vote."

This bill includes all taxes, so that if the poll tax or tax on the head is not paid as stated, the right to vote will cease at least for that year, and his right to vote will be denied at each election thereafter until the taxes are paid.

This amendment will be voted on at all the coming elections, all persons against it fixing the mark on the ballot in front of the word "No."

This is the first time in the history of Kentucky that a money qualification has attempted to be fixed upon the voter.

Not only the vote seller, but the honest man as well will be disfranchised, for the former cannot sell his vote, having none to sell, and the latter, however good a citizen, will be disfranchised.

This law is not so favorable to the vote seller as the certificate law of registration, which the Democratic party has made a vendable commodity with no punishment provided for the seller or the purchaser.

Every man who sells his certificate this year will put it in the power of the purchaser to deprive him of his franchise, or at any rate to destroy the same so as to prevent the vote being cast against this amendment.

"Beckham and the Farmers."

It is heralded over this county that Governor Beckham is the best friend we ever had. We admit he did not oppose the capitol appropriation, but if any one of the many things said about his administration in regard to contributions received (rather tribute exacted) from public contractors be true, then it may be that he favored the appropriation in order to have another large contractor who could, if he felt disposed, contribute to his campaign. But let us look at the governor's record as a friend of the farmer. It was shown by an investigation of the senate that the great tobacco trust, called the American Tobacco company, contributed $15,000 to Governor Beckham's campaign expenses. We do not know whether they thought they had a promise like the liquor men thought they did, but it is plain that the only law that was ever on the statute books that favored the tobacco grower, the McCain law, was repealed by one of the governor's legislatures. Strange that in all his speeches the governor has never once referred to his position on that law or on the tobacco trust, a subject that is alive just now. The farmers and tobacco growers should remember this contribution and the repeal of the law that followed, when they are reminded of the many things the governor has done.—Frankfort Call.

MORE GRAFT

We have heretofore called attention in these columns to the fact that Big Wingate Thompson, the governor's private policeman, stands charged by the grand jury of this county of the offense of selling liquors without a state or city license so to do, although he has United States license. We have also remarked that Mr. Thompson was keeping some sort of a boarding house on the new capitol grounds. All these things seem to have escaped the attention of the governor, for Thompson is still feeding at the public crib.

We now desire to call the attention of the public to the fact that Thompson's boarding house was furnished with blankets and such like from the state arsenal here. We do not know by whose authority and permission, but we are informed from a source we believe to be reliable that all the blankets Thompson has in his lodging house he obtained from the state arsenal. They must have been given or loaned him, which is in fact the same, as there is no report of record where they were ever sold and the proceeds covered into the treasury. It is bad enough to keep him on the pay-roll as policeman, but it appears to outsiders that there exists some sort of partnership or other tie that gives Wingate Thompson this unusual favor. He is furnished ground for his lodging house and allowed to sell liquors without license, and all the time the governor's private policeman.—Frankfort Call, September 25, 1906.

The above is from a Democratic paper whose editor was and is a partisan Democrat. It was written on the ground, and so far as known to the writer, has never been contradicted. This happens in the capital of the state and in the county where trees, fruits, vegetables, rocks, hills, clays, grasses, corn and hogs are made to vote the Democratic ticket.

FIRE MARSHAL.

The legislature by an act approved by Governor Beckham March 21, 1906, authorized the appointment of a fire marshal at a salary of $2,400 per annum, together with any expenses including expenses of deputy, detectives and officers. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, the salary and expenses of this new and improved method of furnishing jobs to political henchmen cost the munificent sum of $8,886.34. The job is held down by the gentleman who conducted the state primary in 1906, in which the county of Johnson with a total Democratic vote of 900 gave Beckham and Hager majorities of 1,500 each, and the county of Martin, where not a single ballot was sent, gave them a majority of 253. He is the same man who in the same state primary sent less than 100 ballots to the strong McCreary town of Hickman, where nearly 700 Democrats wanted to vote.

This "fire marshal" and those who co-operate with him, while costing the insurance-paying public about $10,000 dollars, has up to date, succeeded in arresting one sixteen-year-old boy charged with setting fire to a building, and that boy turns out to be crazy.

This is the "fire marshal" who attended the Democratic railroad commissioners' convention at Henderson, where, according to the public press and the private statements of some who attended, the successful candidate traded all the clerkships under the commission and the lieutenant governorship in 1911 in order to win.

This is the same "fire marshal" who when that convention was over, found his family too sick to permit his obeying a subpoena to appear before the Trigg county grand jury and substantiate the charges which he had, in self-glorifying manner, paraded in the public press.

This is the same "fire marshal" whose paper, "The Fulton Leader," was designated by Governor Beckham as the medium of official communication and of which General John K. Hendricks, now the Democratic nominee for attorney general, said in his speech at Nicholasville in 1903: "Many dollars are thus dropped from the executive office into this vulgar and obscure sheet."

This is the same "fire marshal" whose relations to the railroads was so close that when he wanted the Democratic county chairman to come to Louisville to consult about the best way to hold a Democratic state primary in 1906, offered to furnish a pass.

This "fire marshal" is a valuable spoke in the drive-wheel of the machine.

Outrageous Methods of Securing Campaign Funds.

We were shown a letter from a lady employed at one of the asylums which stated that out of a salary of $20 due for the month of August she was required to pay to the campaign fund of Governor Beckham, $5, or one-fourth of her small salary. The letter also stated that this same thing was done to all the female employes; she did not know about the men.

This is a shame and an outrage. Captain Kidd and his pirates robbed the rich, the James gang never took tribute from a woman, and especially a poor woman who worked for wages. Robin Hood gave to the poor instead of holding them up. John A. Murrell killed a man for 35 cents, but he never robbed a woman. That is left for the machine to do.—Frankfort Call.

A Game With Figures.

This game is played with an opponent each in turn placing a number on paper from 1 to 6, adding them up mentally as they proceed. The person who succeeds in placing the last figure which shall make the column add up 30 wins the game.

The player unacquainted with the secret always loses. The explanation involves the number 9. Your friend has written, say, 6. You put down, say, 3, which will add up to 9, says Home Notes. Your friend puts down, say, 1. You put down 6, for the second addition must equal 7. Again he puts down, say, 5. You make it 7 by adding 2. He puts down, say, 3. You again make it 7 by putting down 4. The addition foots up 30, and as you have put down the last figures you have won. Be careful to make the first addition 9 and the following three 7 each, and victory will never desert you.

Fairy Light—A Game.

A game for indoors or out. Take a piece of cloth about two yards square; a tablecloth or sheet will do. Have this held by the players. Upon the cloth have a white feather. When all is ready have the players sing together:

Fairy white, fairy light,
We will blow with all our might,
And none will be afraid.
If you fall on any one,
He must then renounce the fun
Till a forfeit he has paid.

Then toss the sheet upward, setting the feather flying. The object is to run under the feather, not letting it escape, and at the same time blowing it away from yourself and toward some one else, who in turn defends himself. Each player touched by the feather is retired from the game until a forfeit is paid at the end, when a new attack may be begun.

At the Waist

Pains at the waist, back, front, or side, are nearly sure proof of female trouble. Some other signs are headache, pressing-down pains, irregular functions, restlessness, cold limbs, nervousness, etc. These pains may be allayed, the system braced and the womanly functions regulated by the use of

IMMUNITY FOR TAYLOR

A Mere Campaign Card From Beckham and Franklin.

The Clinton Gazette, a Democratic paper, in discussing the offer to grant Gov. W. S. Taylor immunity from arrest if he should return to Kentucky to testify in the Powers case, says: "The offer by Mr. Franklin and Gov. Beckham of immunity from arrest if he would come to testify in the Powers case was a mere campaign card. It seems to have been made through the public press and not pro forma to Mr. Taylor himself. We have no patience with such cheap methods in politics. We protest against the belittling of Goebel's assassination by such politics. Better the cases against Powers and Taylor were dismissed than that the crime of crimes in Kentucky's history should be made a plaything of by cold-blooded politicians of the breed that flourishes in Kentucky today."

SOUTH TRIMBLE'S LETTER

The Herald printed on its first page yesterday morning a letter said to have been written in 1899 by South Trimble, Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor of Kentucky. The document, inviting a Democratic election commissioner to lend himself to improper purposes to insure the election of the Democratic ticket, is so pertinent that it needs no further elucidation. It is well calculated to stand strictly on its own merits, to plead its own cause, to speak loudly and often during the current campaign.

The spectacle of a candidate for the high office of lieutenant governor, a position which makes the governorship within reach, in case of death or mishap, urging an election commissioner to vacate his office in favor of another, who, it was alleged, would lend himself more readily to the purposes of the machine, is one which the voters of Kentucky may well contemplate with alarm.

It is true that South Trimble was not a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1899, but he was then South Trimble as he is now South Trimble, with the same motives, the same mind, the same impulses, the same standard of principle and honor, the ambitions, and, we presume, the same tactics. It is not for the people to presume that the South Trimble of 1899 is any different than the South Trimble of 1907.

Witness what the former congressman is alleged to have written in 1899:

"Our county is all right—safely Democratic—but city elections cannot be won with a fair count, and you know that as well as I do. Incompetent, unreliable Republican judges will have to be appointed. The right of the Republicans to indicate who shall represent them as judges will have to be ignored, and the election commissioners will have to do this or receive the ill will of the city Democrats.

"I would not do it, I could not conscientiously do so, and I know that you would not; therefore, my advice to you is to refuse to act.

"I had a talk with Judge Pryor on the subject, and he said that if you would refuse to act he would appoint anyone that we might indicate, which would be Ben Marshall. You know Ben is so partisan that he thinks anything is right that helps the Democrats."

He would not do it because, as he says, he could not conscientiously do so. A fine high-class sense of morals! He could not do it, but he could have others do it. He could not do it, but could urge another man to be a party to the offense. He could not do it, but he could conceive and devise the scheme.

Meanwhile, Governor Beckham and S. W. Hager, the candidate for governor, are preaching the doctrine of reform, of good government and honesty in office. Governor Beckham poses as a reformer of Louisville and indorses South Trimble. Hager promises good government with South Trimble presiding over the senate. The Democratic ticket offers clean government with the alleged author of that letter running for the second highest office within the gift of the people of Kentucky.

What choice is there left to the voters? On the one hand they are offered a ticket teeming with the unwholesome stench of mismanagement, corruption and machine politics, while on the other they are offered a ticket headed by Willson and Cox, a ticket of men promising a clean administration and proposing to give a clean administration when elected.—Louisville Herald.

Did His Best.

"My goodness!" exclaimed an anxious mother. "What in the world made your face so dirty, Willie?"

"Johnny Jones and me had a fight," exclaimed Willie, "an' he throw'd more dirt in my face than I could swaller." —Home Magazine.

Not Honestly.

"Have you ever been in jail before?" demanded the judge.

"No, your honor, honestly, never!"

"Of course you haven't honestly. Few men get there that way."—Kansas City Independent.

Like All the Rest.

The Lady—My husband is particularly liable to seasickness, captain. Could you tell him what to do in case of an attack? The Captain—'Tain't necessary, mum. He'll do it.—Judge.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Age to Breed Sows.

The question often arises, At what age should a sow be bred for the first time? If the animal has shown exceptionally rapid development and is in unusually fine condition, breeding at ten months would not be much of a risk, but under ordinary circumstances it is best to wait until she is fully a year old, says a Pennsylvania farmer in Farm Progress. The cause of this tendency to breed too young is clear enough, as it is only natural for the owner to wish her to beget a litter at the earliest date possible, as every day of delay means additional risk when we consider the high per cent of mortality among hogs. It is better to risk delay, however, than to have runty pigs or an undeveloped sow.

As to the ordinary error of killing sows before their age of usefulness has expired, the question is not so complicated, although the reason cannot so easily be explained, and no effort at explanation will be made. It is a common custom to butcher a sow just after she has produced and nursed her second litter. This is an extravagant practice. The sow may still be good for a score of pigs. By all means give her a chance to show her further ability. In nine cases out of ten it will pay.

Sheep Notes.

Keep the ram as long as he is vigorous, provided he's a good stock getter.

Force the growth of those sale rams; feed them wisely, but not extravagantly.

Worms seem to be a little more prevalent than usual, therefore don't forget worm powders and salt.

It looks as if South Africa is destined to become a great sheep country by the way her breeders are gobbling up the best of the produce of this country and Australia.

There is only one way by which we can ever hope to figure high in the list of shippers of export or mutton sheep to the British market and that is by using the best rams possible.—American Sheep Breeder.

Care of Farm Machinery.

As soon as harvest is over look the machinery all over. If there are sections needed in the knife, any guards broken or other repairs required have them made now, a year in advance. Then after you have seen that there are no nuts off or bolts lost and everything in good shape paint up all the parts that can be painted and oil everything that is susceptible to rust. You can do this some day when too wet to work or at odd moments when not busy. When next harvest season comes you will be glad you did it, because you will be "good and ready."

Ration For Hogs.

It is stated that the Michigan Agricultural college as an experiment fed some pigs, a cross between the Berkshire and Tamworth, which made great gains. Four of the litter were fed a balanced ration made up of 382 pounds of wheat middlings and 682 pounds of cornmeal, mixed with water, and it cost $3.62 to make an increase of 100 pounds in weight. Five pigs of the same litter were fed cornmeal mixed with water, and it cost $6.07 to make an increase of 100 pounds in weight.

Scratches In Horses.

For scratches in horses wash the affected parts with warm castile soap and water. Then grease with fish oil once every three days to keep the sore soft, and give the following medicine: Ten cents' worth each of blood root, copperas, saltpeter and sulphur. Pulverize all together and give one tablespoonful night and morning in the feed for three weeks. In most cases, if the blood is purified, the sores will heal. This remedy is good for both cattle and horses.

Tuberculosis In Swine.

Tuberculosis is spreading among swine, says Farm Progress. The causes for the increase of this disease are attributed to keeping hogs in pastures with cattle, feeding unsterilized milk, allowing hogs to consume the carcasses of cattle which have died of the disease or the introduction of breeding stock which has the disease. Tuberculosis can be prevented by exercising care in selecting, breeding and management of stock.

Good Profits In Pecans.

The pecan groves of Texas are greater bonanzas than Nevada gold mines. Orchards have produced $5,000 worth of commercial nuts in one season per acre. Individual trees yield $150 worth of nuts, and the tree increases in productivity until it is seventy-five years old.

Turnips For Spring Greens.

Leave a patch of turnips in the ground for a supply of spring greens. If covered with straw and cornstalks the turnips will keep in the ground all winter and begin growth early in the spring.

Causes of Garget.

Garget is inflammation of the cow's bag and is usually caused by too great a formation of milk at calving time or by not milking all the milk out clean or a stoppage of some sort in the teats.

Watering Before Feeding.

Care should be taken to water the horses regularly, and never under any circumstances allow a horse to go to his feed after being worked without first having water set before him.

The Horse and His Coat.

A coarse, rough haired animal is generally coarse grained, sluggish and inactive, and many times also ill natured and vicious, and especially is this true of the horse.

How About This, Critic?

Frank Chance says that if Cincinnati had the players they let go in the two past seasons they would now have a first division team. "The team has too many youngsters. They play well enough in spurts, but when it comes to critical points they go up in the air."

Death of Dr. Rinehart.

A telegram was received by relatives here on Tuesday announcing the death in Oakland, Cal., of Dr. James F. Rinehart formerly of this place. No particulars of the death have been received, but it is thought that death was due to appendicitis. About a week ago a letter was received from Mrs Rinehart by her mother, Mrs. Raybourne, of Mackville, saying that Dr. Rinehart had undergone an operation for appendicitis and he appeared to be getting along nicely. Complications which resulted in death must have set in later however. Dr. Rinehart left this place eight years ago for California. His object in making the change was primarily on account of his health, he at that time was threatened with a serious lung trouble. For the past three or four years however Dr. Rinehart has become a strong robust man and was entirely freed of his lung weakness

Dr. James F. Rinehart was born in this county about 38 years ago and after completing his medical education began the practice of his profession in Springfield. For several years he enjoyed a large and lucrative practice. He was a man of wonderful energy and ambition. About ten years ago he married Miss Mallie Raybourn of this county and to that union there are three children. Dr. Rinehart had prospered wonderfully in California. He was enjoying a very large practice and besides he had become a rich man through wise investments in real estate. He had built one of the finest residences in the city of Oakland and had under construction an apartment building containing 100 rooms.

The remains were buried at Oakland and it is supposed that Mrs. Rinehart and the children will remain at that place for the present at least.

"We may live without friends; we may live without books;
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.
He may live without love—what is passion but pining?
But where is the man that can live without dining?"

Mrs. W. A. Johnson, of Paris, Ky., a graduate of the Boston Cooking School, arrived Monday to teach a class of ladies the art of scientific cooking and service of meals. Room has been taken in what is known as the Roberts house near the Presbyterian church and a range installed with which all the cooking is to be done. A complete line of utensils are at hand, a large number of which the average woman would need instruction as to their use, but when once used would not be without them.

For each day of this week, a complete menu is prepared and demonstrated before the class, each step in the preparation being plainly explained and the cooking done in plain view of the class. Then each viand sampled by the class. This will quite likely be the most popular part of the program.

A large class has been secured and new pupils will gladly be enrolled at any time.

In most cases cansumption results from a neglected or improperly treated cold. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate coughs and prevents serious results. Latest Win For Highball.

Over a track by no means at its best Highball, driven by Geers, won the $10,000 Empire State stake at Syracuse, N. Y., recently in straight heats, trotting each heat in exactly equal time, Besides winning the biggest end of the rich purse, he also gained the distinction of trotting the season's fastest three heat race.

With four races on the afternoon's card and the start of Major Delmar against the track's trotting record without the wind shield, a large attendance was drawn into the racing inclosure in spite of the threatening weather.

Highball was the favorite, selling at $100 to Sonoma Girl's $25 and the field at the same figure. Just before the race was called there appeared to be very little money in sight against the favorite at 1 to 2.

Football Gossip.

Success on the track and diamond this season has given encouragement to the coaches for a strong showing on the gridiron for Illinois this fall. Van Hook, the big guard, will probably be the new captain to succeed Burroughs, debarred by the three year rule.

Eight of the new captains in leading teams are evenly divided as linesmen or in the back field as follows: Yale—Biglow, tackle; Harvard—Parker, center; Cornell—Cook, tackle; Carlisle—Lubo, tackle; Pennsylvania—Folwell, halfback; Princeton—McCormick, fullback; West Point—Smith, halfback, and Annapolis—Douglass, halfback.

Boston Auto Accidents.

Because of the number of accidents recently in and about Boston, where motor cars have run into carriages, injuring people and horses, and made off without stopping to inquire the results President George T. Angell of the Massachusetts Society For Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has sent out this notice: "In behalf of the Massachusetts Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals I hereby offer a reward of $10, for evidence that will convict any driver or owner of a motor car who shall in violation of law cause the death or serious injury of a horse."

Joe Gans Won $27,000.

Joe Gans is about $27,000 ahead on the Britt fight, besides what he bet on himself, which is believed to be considerable.

The champion said:

"There never was a moment that I did not know I had the fight won. Britt did not hurt me at all, and after the first round I knew that I could block his body blows, with which he expected to do so much damage."

HOW TO MIX IT.

Directions To Prepare Simple, Yet Remarkable Home Mixture.

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable, yet simple and harmless prescription, which anyone can easily prepare at home:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take a teaspoon ful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and being of vegtable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture if taken regularly for a few days is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach While there are many so-called Rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc, some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appraciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquire at the drug stores of this neighborhoo elicits the infor mation that these drugs are harmless and can be bought seperately, or the druggist here will mix the prescription for our readers if asked to.

DISENCHANTED

Margaret Brockton never for an instant suspected herself of being a sentimentalist. She thought she was modern in every particular, including heart and soul. She was charming, she knew, and somewhat vain, clever and a little mercenary and thoroughly worldly wise and worldly minded, and yet there were three years when Miss Brockton rivaled any old time heroine of romance in her sentimental attitude.

It happened in this wise: One day when she was twenty-three there came to her a certain stalwart fellow she had known from infancy and told her what she already knew—that he loved her and wished to marry her. Miss Brockton, liking him exceedingly well, realizing how pleasant life might be made with his money, his name, his devotion to her and his companionship and deciding that the ecstatic love of which poems and novels treated would never come to her anyway, accepted him. The engagement came out duly. The cups and saucers came in. Margaret liked Jack Whittlestone a great deal and found the position of fiancee charming, and all was well.

Then the villain appeared upon the scene in the shape of Louis Radcliffe, Jack's cousin. Louis was a delightfully unmodern person, who seemed to have taken for his model some of the early Victorian heroes. He was a combination of youthful romanticism, elderly cynicism and other interesting qualities. He had a superb scorn of the conventions, a magnificent belief in himself and a corresponding amiable skepticism in regard to other people.

He "interested" Margaret greatly, she said, at first. Then she ceased to say anything about him. Jack, not being skilled in the ways of women, did not worry over either his betrothed's speech or its absence. He knew the new woman well enough not to assert his rights and bid her have less conversation with his cousin, even had he wished to do so. Liberty being the ... of Margaret's life and unsuspect- ... Margaret knew perfectly in her few ... hours that she did not wish to ... y Louis Radcliffe. She realized ... would develop into a thorough- ... able sort of husband, even ... his poverty.

Then it was that Margaret showed how thoroughly lacking she was in the modern mercenary spirit she had always claimed. It gave her a mournful satisfaction to think that, though she could not marry Louis, who, to tell the truth, had not asked her to do so, she need not marry Jack. So she broke her engagement promptly and proceeded to indulge herself in her great grief. She heard nothing of either of the cousins for a long time, for naturally her course of action with Jack had suspended communication between the families.

For three years she was secretly as romantic as the most romantic schoolgirl. She thought of Louis constantly and pleased herself by imagining that he, in Egypt or Algiers or wherever he was, must know her thoughts. She was exceedingly happy with her grief. Outwardly she seemed much the same, but inwardly she acknowledged the sway of love and its power.

One evening three years after Louis Radcliffe had gone away she went to a reception. A little pudgy woman, overdressed and overgemmed, stood by her hostess' side.

"My cousin, Mrs. Radcliffe, Miss Brockton," said her hostess. And then, with sudden remembrance: "You must recall Mr. Radcliffe. He was Jack Whittlestone's cousin, you know."

And then as Margaret cordially inquired after Mr. Radcliffe and said how she well remembered him sentimentalism for the first time fell away from her. From that moment she was the really skeptical and thoroughly modern woman she had always claimed to be.

THEODORE HOOK.

Stories of the Greatest Practical Joker of His Day.

Of the list of geniuses the name of Theodore Hook is near the top. At sixteen he was making a big income and enjoying great popularity. His name was blazoned in the papers as a prodigy, his portraits were in the shop windows, and he had free admission to all theaters and other places of amusement. For years he was a social and literary lion. His last words were: "It is only to the grave that I must be carried. If my poor children were safe I would not care. I am suffering under a constant depression of spirits which no one who sees me in society dreams of."

Hook's practical jokes were the talk of the day. His intimates egged him on continually, and there was nothing he would stop at. One day they pointed out to him as an appropriate specimen for his museum a gilded eagle of enormous dimensions which had just been erected over a grocer's shop. A few weeks afterward while entertaining his coterie at dinner at one of the old taverns he ordered the "game" to be served. To the astonishment of the guests the waiter entered the room staggering under the burden of a dish of unusual size. On uncovering it there was produced the identical eagle which Hook as a practical joke had contrived to carry off. Merely for this sort of fun Hook used to pull off knockers and bell handles, carry away tradesmen's signs, overturn the boxes of sleeping janitors and do other deviltment until he had a roomful of household attachments and street ornaments.

One night Hook was passing a great house where there was a reception of the swellest of the swells. Dinner had just been announced. He said to the friend accompanying him: "John, I'm going in here to spend the evening. Call for me at 11 o'clock." The friend was horrified. Said he in protest, "You do not know these grand people, and you are not an invited guest." "That's all right. Call for me at 11." Knocking at the door, he gave his hat confidently to the lackey and was ushered upstairs. Entering the drawing room, he affected at first to have discovered his mistake and poured such sallies of wit that the host and hostess actually pressed him to stay for dinner.

At 11 o'clock, when his friend called, not knowing whether he would find Hook at the reception or in the lockup, he was more than astounded on entering the drawing room to see Hook seated at the piano delivering some extempore poetry to a bevy of the fairest women in the gathering. Perceiving the entrance of this friend, the practical joker, who had not hitherto divulged his name, arose and said:

"I'm very much pleased with your fare
Your cellar's as good as your cook;
My friend's Mr. Terry, the player,
And I'm Mr. Theodore Hook."

The king, being present and full of enjoyment, took a great fancy to Hook and immediately appointed him treasurer to the island of the Mauritius with a salary of $10,000 a year.—New York Press.

A Big Boiled Dinner.

Cooks in large hotels and boarding houses may think they get up meals on a big scale, but when it comes to wholesale cookery the little village of Liss, on the London and Southwestern railway, England, surpasses them all. At a barbecue held there some years ago an ox was boiled, not roasted, whole, and this is how it was done: A large hole was dug in the ground and lined with brick. Inside this a tank large enough to hold the ox was built. The carcass was then lowered into the tank, having first been placed in a case formed by heavy crossbars, to which chains were attached. Pulleys from a scaffolding above were used to raise and lower the ox. Many vegetables, such as carrots, onions, cabbages and potatoes, were boiled with the meat. The boiling required seven hours.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

The Grand Army's New Chief.

Judge Charles Germman Burton, the new commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, was attending public school when the civil war broke out. Although but fifteen years of age, he enlisted as a private in the Nineteenth Ohio infantry and soon saw active service with his regiment. Three days after his sixteenth birthday he took part in the battle of Shiloh, one of the bloodiest of the early years of the war. His youthful frame was unable to withstand the rigors of the campaigns through which he passed, and he was discharged for disability in October, 1862. Regaining his health, however, he served in the hundred days' campaign.

After the close of the war Judge Burton studied law and was admitted to the bar at Warren, O. Removing to Missouri in 1869, he began the practice of law, finally settling in Nevada, Mo., where he still lives. He soon attained high standing in his profession, becoming circuit attorney and later judge of the circuit court. He was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress as a Republican from the Fifteenth district of Missouri. Last winter he was appointed collector of internal revenue at Kansas City.

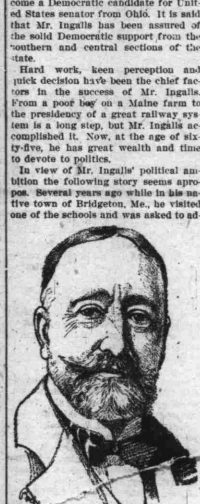

Judge Burton has always taken a deep interest in Grand Army affairs and has been commander of his post and judge advocate and commander of the department of Missouri.

Would Wear the Senatorial Toga.

Friends of Melville E. Ingalls, former president of the Big Four and Chesapeake and Ohio railroads and now chairman of the board of directors of the Big Four, have advised him to become a Democratic candidate for United States senator from Ohio. It is said that Mr. Ingalls has been assured of the solid Democratic support from the southern and central sections of the state.

Hard work, keen perception and quick decision have been the chief factors in the success of Mr. Ingalls. From a poor boy on a Maine farm to the presidency of a great railway system is a long step, but Mr. Ingalls accomplished it. Now, at the age of sixty-five, he has great wealth and time to devote to politics.

In view of Mr. Ingalls' political ambition the following story seems apropos. Several years ago while in his native town of Bridgeton, Me., he visited one of the schools and was asked to address the scholars. Complying, he ended by saying that every boy could be president of the United States if he tried. He then asked, "How many children hope to be president some day?" Every hand was raised but one.

"And why don't you hope to be president?" asked Ingalls.

"Because I'm a Democrat," answered the boy.

General Ainsworth.

Once an army medico, now major general, adjutant general and boss of the whole military works, Fred Crayton Ainsworth is fifty-five years old and still climbing. According to people who know, Ainsworth is as ambitious as Julius Caesar or Napoleon Bonaparte and has a heap more sense than either. Just now the government is saving $500,000 with every passing year owing to its adoption of a card index system invented by General Ainsworth which makes the full history of each and every pensioner and soldier immediately available. He knows everybody in Washington, and everybody knows him and likes him.

CORNISH DIALECT.

Some Quaint Terms That Are Common Among the Natives.

"A hitched my foot in the sconce and knacked my nuddick, and A wadn't able to clunky for a fortnight."

Readers of dialect tales will probably take it for granted that this sentence is Scotch. It is, however, Cornish and, being interpreted, means, "I caught my foot in the pavement and struck the nape of my neck, and I was not able to swallow for a fortnight."

There are some quaint terms common in Cornwall which have a pleasing savor of their own. The phrase "my dear"—prolonged to two syllables—is not, for instance, any indication of especial affection. It is a common form of address to either man or woman. So also, though with rather more discrimination in its use, is "my dear life."

A young child is mentioned in terms of endearment as "my 'ansome" or "tender deear" or even "tender worm." "Son" and "sonny" are used without the least relation to the age or sex of the person addressed. A son may sometimes be heard speaking to his own father as "my son" or a husband calling his wife "sonny."

"Young" means simply unmarried. A bachelor of eighty is "a young man." Of a bride still in her teens it was said that she was "a pretty lot better looking than when she was young." An old person is not simply old. He is "old ancient." Several New England localisms are found in Cornish speech, as "cricket" for a small stool, "chores" for household jobs and "dowdy" for pudding, though in America the latter word survives only as part of "pandawdy," the delicious deep spiced apple pie of country housewives.

A Cornish anecdote relates that a small boy left at home to supervise the family dinner while the rest of the household were at church, having, like King Alfred, neglected his duty and allowed the fig pudding to scorch, in his dismay ran to the church and from the doorway made signs to the housewife to come forth. She indignantly signed him to wait, which for a time he did, but at length, becoming impatient, cried aloud in reply to her further winks and grimaces, to the scandal of the startled congregation:

"Yiew may winky and skrinky as long as yiew du plase, but the figgy dowdy is burnt gin the crock!"—Liverpool Mercury.

OUR BRAINS ARE DOUBLE.

But Only One of Them Is Used to Think With.

Man has a pair of brains just as he has a pair of eyes and a pair of ears, declares Dr. William Hanna Thomson in Everybody's. But, asserts Dr. Thomson, only one of our two brains is used to think with. He continues:

"When we come into this world we have a pair of quite thoughtless brains and nothing more. To become intelligent beings we must acquire a whole host of mental faculties and endowments, not one of which does a human being bring with him at birth. No one was ever born speaking English nor any other language. No newly born babe knows anything by sight nor by any other sense. Every kind of knowledge has to be gained by personal education. But only recently have we found that this education necessitates the creation of a local anatomical change in brain matter to make it the special seat for that 'accomplishment.' Thus no one can become a skilled violin player until by long fashioning he has at last made a violin playing place in his cerebrum.

"But all this brain fashioning takes so much time and trouble that for mere economy of labor, as one hemisphere will do all that is necessary, the individual spends his efforts on one of them only. As both hemispheres are equally good for this purpose, which of the two he will educate depends on which one he begins with. This is settled for him when as a child he begins all his training by the hand that he then most easily uses; hence it is that all the speech centers and all the knowing and educated places are to be found only in the left hemisphere of the right handed and in the right hemisphere of the left handed."

The Landlady's Mistake.

On her first night at the seaside lodging the visitor found it incredible it seemed, for the landlady had appeared a neat, cleanly, cautious body. But as the lady visitor knew little of her landlady and nothing of her predecessor in the apartment she decided to mention the matter at breakfast. "I found something in my bedroom," she began, and the landlady interrupted. "Then you must have brought it with you!" "I am quite sure I didn't," said the visitor, "for I counted all mine before I left home. But if you insist that this sovereign is mine, of course"—London Chronicle.

LAST SLAVE MARKET

In Morocco Human Beings Are Still Bought and Sold.

AUCTION IN PUBLIC SQUARE.

Remarkable Scene Described by a Traveler—Beautiful Girl Sold For $2,000—Average Price $40 to $50. Aged Bondsmen Thrown Out to Die.

Despite the war waged for centuries against the shameful slave traffic which threatened to depopulate Africa, there is still one country in that continent where human beings are publicly bought and sold. That country is Morocco, the last independent Mohammedan empire of Africa, whose fate may soon be decided by France and Spain. The public slave market of Marrakesh, one of the most important of Moorish cities, is thus described by a correspondent of the New York Tribune:

I entered the market about 6 o'clock. Not a slave was to be seen as I entered the great square. But squatting down all around were many hundreds of Arab men in robes of spotless wool and silk, often with their own little children by their side, gorgeous in every color of the rainbow—scarlet and gold, crimson and mauve, emerald green and indigo blue.

SHE WAS BOUGHT BY THE KAID EL GUNDAF.

An Arab comes riding through, two earringed blacks with bright yellow slippers running ahead to clear a path for him. This is El Glawi, who collects the per capita slave tax for the Moorish government. His entry is the signal for the dilals, or auctioneers, to come forth from the slave pens and range themselves for prayer. The setting sun is behind them as their leader lifts up his voice to the "most high who gave the true faith through his messenger." Blessings are called down upon prospective buyers and their purchases.

The prayers done, the men break up and hurry over to the slave pens—little palm thatched huts of mud. I followed and found in one of the largest ten or twelve women and girls and small children. Some of the girls had pulled their woolen haiks over their faces and seemed anxious about their fate. Others were careless and smiling. The little boys and girls were playing games on the floor.

The head auctioneer allotted so many slaves to each of his men, and the sale began. Each dilal led forth two at a time. I noticed each had been specially dressed for the occasion. The younger women were radiant in crimson silks and jingling bangles and anklets of massive silver. This finery had been borrowed for the sale. Apart from negroes of both sexes I was astonished to see "white" women, young girls and children. By "white" is meant the Moorish and Arab race, some of whom are as fair as or even fairer than a southern European, with light hair and blue eyes.

With swift strides the auctioneer and his charges strode down one lane of the market and up another, calling out the merits of his pair with never ceasing eloquence. This young man was strong as one of the old heroes; that girl was fair to look upon and a wonder in preparing rare dishes.

Suddenly a languid Moor, throwing back his dark blue shilham, beckons the auctioneer. The man approaches, salutes and stands on one side. The slave kneels, and the possible buyer examines teeth and muscles. Turning to the expectant dilal, he gives one guttural number, and the next moment the trio are on their way down the great square, the tall figure in the middle shouting the bid at his loudest. This attracts attention. Another summons, another inspection, a bid of $10 more.

In still more staccato tones, seeing that his commission of 2½ per cent is fast rising, the auctioneer again goes on his way, almost dragging the slaves with him. Prices rule from $40 to $50 of our money up to $2,000. I saw this sum bid for a really beautiful girl of seventeen.

She was robed in a bright orange gown and had slippers of green morocco embroidered with gold and silver thread. She was bought by the powerful Kaid El Gundaf, whose khalifa, or lieutenant governor, was bidding for him.

When each pair of slaves is disposed of the auctioneer goes back to his own pen and brings forth another couple. Their demeanor varies curiously. I saw an old negro woman of perhaps fifty years shuffling around amid the jokes of the squatting lines of Moors. Infants of five or seven trotted round with bold eyes and smiling faces. There were Moorish girls, shy and shrinking; young negro giants who could run with a load of 200 pounds and anxious eyed mothers with children.

Gradually one sees the slaves sitting by their new master's side. The pens are nearly empty, but one of them holds a pitiful few that none will bid for at any price. Here are aged graybeards and old women, with perhaps young fellows who have been crippled in the "powder play" or in tribal warfare.

The Koranic warning, "He who behaves ill to his slave will not enter paradise," is little regarded, and aged slaves past work are thrown out into the streets to starve. With my own eyes I saw such men lying dying in the covered streets and bazaars of Marrakesh.

Whence come all the hapless creatures sold every year literally like cattle in this way? They have been raided from defenseless villages as far south as the Niger itself—a region perhaps seven months' distant from the Sok-el-Abid of Marrakesh. For hundreds of years these Arabs have been slave raiders, and the penalty of six months' convict labor and a large fine does not appear to be a sufficient deterrent, for the profits are enormous and the raiding Arabs are never so happy as when they are fighting.

SPEAKS AFTER FIVE YEARS.

Murderer Struck Dumb by Conviction Talks Again.

Jacob Pesendorfer, an inmate of the State Asylum For the Insane at Norristown, Pa., recently spoke the first word that he had uttered in five years and in consequence will be removed at once to the Eastern penitentiary, where he will spend the remainder of his life. Pesendorfer killed his father-in-law, Henry Gautschi, five years ago.

The man believed that he would be acquitted, and when the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree Pesendorfer was rendered speechless. Alienists declared that the shock had rendered him insane, and instead of being hanged he was sentenced to imprisonment for life in the insane asylum.

His speech came back to him as suddenly as it had left. He was sitting in his room when he suddenly shouted, "I can talk again; I can talk again!" He was highly elated and did not seem worried when told that he would have to spend the remainder of his days in prison.

RATTLESNAKE IN HIS BED.

South Dakota Homesteader Has a Midnight Surprise.

To have a huge rattlesnake as a bedfellow without the reptile burying its fangs in him was the experience of Arthur Ricard, a homesteader in the region between the Missouri river and the Black hills of South Dakota.

While the snake was moving around the young man did rapid fire thinking. The night before, for the evening repast he and his brother had eaten the contents of a salmon can, and the empty can was on a shelf just above his head.

HE MADE A LUNGE AT THE SNAKE

Watching his opportunity, Ricard cautiously raised his hand toward the can, which he was able to reach. Grasping the can firmly in his hand, he again watched his opportunity and made a lightninglike lunge at the snake with the jagged edges of the can.

His aim proved true, the rough edges of the can striking the snake squarely below the head and nearly severing the head from the body.

Human Food For Stone Crusher.

His body being drawn into a belt attached to a stone crusher, George Folkenroth, thirty-six years old, of York, Pa., was whirled about a number of times, and then his body was thrown into a recess in the crusher alongside of one end of the shaft, causing death. His injuries included a fractured skull, broken neck and left arm severed from the body. Several employees went to his assistance when they heard him scream for help, but they were unable to be of any aid. Folkenroth at the time of the accident was descending the steps on the inside of the machine.

A GOOD DOCTOR will recommend BALLARD'S HOREHOUND SYRUP

Every cough weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, breaks down the tissues and leaves the system in a weakened condition, causing it to be more susceptible to the consumptive germ. Ballard's Horehound Syrup will cure the cough and strengthen the system.

The Children Like It.

Mrs. C. H. Runyon, Stanberry, Mo., writes: "I have used your Ballard's Horehound Syrup and find it a very useful medicine for coughs and colds, and in fact all lung troubles. It is very pleasant to take, and we have no trouble in inducing the children to take it. I recommend it highly."

Don't wait until that cough develops into a more dangerous malady. Save yourself and children many sick spells and insure a long and healthy life.

CURES COUGHS, COLDS, SORE LUNGS, BRONCHITIS, HOARSENESS, WHOOPING COUGH AND ALL LUNG TROUBLES.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Lamb Feeding Experiment.

The Iowa experiment station recently marketed some lambs that had been fed to determine the value of different rations. Lot 1 was fed mangels, lot 2 sugar beets, lot 3 corn silage and lot 4 grain and alfalfa. There was no material difference in the condition of the lambs in lots 1 and 4 at the finish. While the lot given corn silage was in better shape than the one given sugar beets, it was not as good as lots 1 and 4. It is the claim of English shepherds that succulent feeds are necessary in securing a good finish on lambs, but the above experiment indicated that, while the lambs fed such feeds made better gains than others, there was not enough difference to warrant the buying of such feeds.

Fence the Orchard.

In nearly all cases it will be best to have the orchard fenced to itself. It is not designed to use as a general pasture. Neither can it be considered advisable to pasture all of the time. With the exception of poultry, there will be occasion when it will be best to keep out all kinds of stock.

A good part of the time after the trees have made a sufficient growth to make it best to seed down to clover or grass it can be used as a hog pasture, but it will be an exceptional case when it can be considered best to keep out the poultry. It is in pasturing more especially that fencing is most important, as then it is possible to keep out all stock when necessary and turn them in when desired.

Eastern League Affairs.

The following is a full list of Eastern league players who have been either sold or drafted by the major leagues this season: McCarthy of Newark, by Cincinnati; Kelley and Thoney of Toronto, by the Boston Nationals; Lake of Jersey City, by the New York Americans; Foxen and Clement of Jersey City, by the Philadelphia Nationals, and Hall and Burchell of Baltimore, by the Boston Americans.

The Feet of the Colt.

Sound feet in the horse is necessary to its future usefulness and value. To procure them careful attention must be given to the feet of the colt. The hoofs must not be allowed to grow until they weaken and break down the wall above, cover the frog and deform or compress the heel.

If the colt is kept on good ground its hoofs will not need attention more than once every few weeks, but if kept in a stable the rasp must be used quite often to keep the hoof in good shape, while the whole hoof must be washed often and the frog and clefts picked free of all that might irritate. The floor should be kept soft and warm with good, clean straw.
